PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Director of Community Relations, University of Virginia

Charlottesville, Virginia

August, 2003 – June, 2014

Led efforts to build bridges positively uniting the University and the community by engaging in sustained relationship-building that facilitated communication, fostered understanding about the University and helped address community needs. A significant component of building those relationships was looking for ways to link U.Va.'s resources to community-service opportunities. One such example is the Day in the Life Program, through which 3,100 U.Va. students provided 57,240 hours of mentoring and tutoring assistance to 10,065 area youth over a ten-year period. Another component was development of a sustainability-awareness campaign, through which U.Va. employees and students helped the environment. Yet another component was a commitment to broadening University-wide support in the Commonwealth of Virginia Campaign, a workplace-giving program, and Day of Caring, an annual day of volunteer service. In addition, as part of the commitment to fostering understanding about U.Va., led the development of the University's first "Report to the Community," "Good Neighbor Guide," "Sofa Shuffle" furniture-recycling event, and U.Va. community job fair.

Interim Director of Community Relations, University of Virginia

Charlottesville, Virginia

August, 2001 – August, 2003

Revamped and substantially broadened scope and outreach of Community Relations Office. The broadened effort included five major outreach efforts: to neighbors, area nonprofit organizations, local businesses, local schools, and the community at large. Components of enhanced neighborhood relations efforts included creation of comprehensive new web site, establishment of advisory groups that met frequently with residents living near the University to address issues concerning U.Va.'s unprecedented capital expansion, creation of U.Va. Community Briefings to explain University's growth to the public, and production of University's first "Off-Grounds Living Guide," which encouraged responsible conduct of student renters. As part of broadening service to community, hired the University's first administrator of the Commonwealth of Virginia Campaign, through which U.Va. employees give generously to charities of their choice, and created the Day in the Life Program, through which U.Va. students provided mentoring and tutoring to area youth. Also hired University's first assistant director of community relations.

Senior News Officer, News Services Office, University of Virginia

Charlottesville, Virginia

January 1990 – August, 2001

A writer and media specialist covering the education school, social sciences and student affairs. I wrote about and engaged local, regional and national media attention on psychological research, sociological studies, student events, trends in student/alumni activities and graduation stories. Named to national leadership honor society. Work recognized with six national and regional awards.

Stayed at home with our second child until he was nearly three.
February, 1987 - January, 1990

Director of Public Relations, Piedmont Virginia Community College

Charlottesville, Virginia

August, 1984 - January, 1987

Was the college's first full-time public relations practitioner. As a consequence, the college enjoyed national, statewide and local media attention and benefited from its first comprehensive marketing campaign. Responsibilities included writing and disseminating news releases, writing and editing major college publications, staging special events to secure media attention, serving as coordinator of summer recruitment, and serving as coordinator of lecture series. FTE enrollment grew by nearly 10 percent during tenure. Work recognized by two service awards.

Stayed at home with our first child until he was about two-and-a-half.
January, 1982 - August, 1984

Director of Public Information and Publications, Occidental College

Los Angeles, California

January, 1980 - January, 1982

Administered nine budgets totaling over $750,000 as directed staff of 20 in the college's publications, public information, print shop, mail room and duplicating centers. In charge of the direction, content, appearance, and production of the college's major publications, which included a view book, catalogues, a quarterly alumni magazine, and as well as newsletters, brochures, posters, and flyers. Served as editor of the alumni magazine, writing approximately 40 percent of the copy, including feature stories, news and advertising copy. Also directed the college's lectures/special events series. View book won national award.

Director of Publications, Texas Association of School Boards

Austin, Texas

May, 1978 - January, 1980

In charge of the direction, content and production of a variety of publications including a quarterly scholarly magazine, a weekly legislative newsletter, a quarterly legal newsletter, and a quarterly general newsletter plus special-interest handbooks, flyers, manuals, and annual reports. Revenue from sales of the publications was triple that of any previous years. Also served as editor/policy consultant, writing school district policies to conform to state, federal mandates. Work recognized with six awards.

Information Officer, Virginia Commonwealth University

Richmond, Virginia

September, 1973 - April, 1978

James R. Sofka, Ph.D.

jsofka@aol.com

Dr. James R. Sofka specializes in international relations and political leadership in the era of the American Founding. He has designed and delivered innovative academic, executive education, and general audience courses in these fields in both traditional and distance-learning formats and teaches regularly for the Brookings Institution, the Federal Executive Institute, and the University of Virginia's Osher Lifelong Learning Institute. He previously taught in the Department of Politics in the University of Virginia, where he also served as Dean of the undergraduate Honors program in the College of Arts and Sciences. He received his M.A. in 1991 and Ph.D. in Politics 1995 from the University of Virginia and his A.B. with Honors in Government from Franklin and Marshall College in 1989.

A Jefferson scholar specializing in diplomatic history, Dr. Sofka has published widely on American foreign relations in the Founding era and has contributed to international conferences organized by American and European universities and global research institutions such as the Robert H. Smith International Center for Jefferson Studies at Monticello, where he has held two fellowships. In addition, he has presented on Jefferson for the U.S. Department of State, all uniformed branches of the U.S. military, the Virginia Executive Institute, Monticello, the American Academy of Diplomacy, and executive audiences from prominent American and international corporations. Along with other leading scholars, Dr. Sofka appeared in the 2010 History Channel documentary "Jefferson," has served as a consultant to historical film projects, and has been interviewed by national media outlets. He co-edited a volume of articles by leading American and European scholars on America's role in the Mediterranean region during Jefferson's presidency. His most recent book, Metternich, Jefferson, and the Enlightenment: Statecraft and Political Theory in the Early Nineteenth Century, was featured at a forum hosted by Monticello in 2012. His current book project, "A Commerce Which Must be Protected": Thomas Jefferson and American National Security, is in preparation.

Dr. Sofka resides in Ivy, Virginia and serves on an advisory committee of Albemarle County, the Board of Directors of the University of Virginia O.L.L.I.

Foundation, and is active in several community organizations and foundations in the arts and historic preservation.
